FARMINGTON

Unionville Sculptor Awarded Arts Grant

FARMINGTON — Matthew Weber, a sculptor from Unionville, was one of 10 local artists who received grants from the Greater Hartford Arts Council's New Boston Fund Individual Artist Fellowship.
The artists were honored April 6 with a reception at the Greater Hartford Welcome Center in Hartford.

The fellowships this year were given to painters, vocalists, sculptors, a photographer and a storyteller from 10 towns throughout the region.

Weber and the other artists each received $1,000 to supplement their incomes so that they can devote their time to their art.

Weber uses basic New England building materials, such as logs, shingles and shims to create his minimalist wood sculptures. He was inspired many years ago by the shingled façade of his neighbor's late Victorian home.

A Connecticut native, Weber graduated from the University of Connecticut and the Hartford Art School. He teaches at a number of colleges and is a visiting artist at the Weir Farm Trust in Wilton.

The program is one of a spectrum of grant programs offered by the Greater Hartford Arts Council. Others include operating support for arts organizations, funding of salaries at heritage organizations, project support for specific programs and events, and funding for public art installations.
